FYI.

We need to nip this one in the bud. The last thing we need is insidious gossip leaking out about deflection, unexplained pain and raised ion levels with ASR!!!!!!

It would be nice to be able to release volume data on complications (in opposition to the Australian data) and decent data on ion levels.

John

Dear dr. [REDACTED]

I am very happy to hear that you are willing to visit The Netherlands on September 19 this year!

As you might be informed already by Terri, we have started a study in Holland with the ASR-hip. With this study we will compare the manual to the computer navigated procedure.

At the moment one of the steering committee members (d [REDACTED] sees difficulties with the ASR. There are two issues:
1. Movement of the cup in the acetabulum (deflection? or...); I believe you have seen the x-rays and we briefly discussed this during the 20 YR anniversary of Corail in Lyon.

2. Increased Co Cr concentrations in the blood of ASR patients (one year post-op) and patients complaining about pain without obvious reason.

The issues above are reason enough for Dr. [REDACTED] to cease ASR-operations, until he receives a satisfying answer. We are currently investigating this with involvement of Magnus [REDACTED]

At the same time the steering committee from the study wants an explanation from DePuy and would like to see a scientific presentation of our world-wide results. Dr. [REDACTED] will prepare a presentation with his experiences as well.

This is why we invited you, as you have so much experience with ASR and are involved since the designing concept of this resurfacing hip. Therefore, I would like to ask you if you could prepare a presentation, focussing on the following:

- Learning curve of ASR-procedure
- Overall results with ASR since introduction, (if possible compared to BHR)
- Complications (which, when and how often?)
- Role of CoCr ion levels in the blood
- ASR in future (running scientific programs, expectations).

Dr. [REDACTED] also would like to compare his and yours presentation, to prevent any overlapping. Could you please advise if you would like to do this directly, or that you want me to interfere?

I hope this is clear to you. If there is anything you would like to discuss further, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Looking forward to hearing from you,

Sincerely,

Annemiek [REDACTED]
